

Improving Your Reading with Vocabulary Victor: The Group

Once upon a time, a large group of people marched through the wilderness. Their camels and horses carried many goods while the bells around their necks clinked and chimed. All around their hooves was a thick cloud of dust. When a rare gust of wind cleared the dust clouds away, glittering weapons and brilliant dresses could be seen.

The leader of the group rode a marvellous horse and sat upon its back on a blanket of tiger skin. Silver bells hung from the horse's reins and feathers waved on top of its head.

The rider looked like a king. He wore a white turban decorated with gold and he carried a curved sword with a magnificent handle. His dark eyes looked out from under his bushy eyebrows and a long beard hung down under his chin.
