Fables

WALT: write your own fable ending

Today you are going to write your own fable ending based on the characters that you planned yesterday.

TIP - Make sure you say how the animals got their defining feature.

Here is my example:

The animals that I planned yesterday were:

1 – A giraffe getting stuck and stretching his neck.

2 – A mole looking at the sun and damaging his eyes.

The giraffe could smell something sweet and searched all around. She stumbled upon a hole in the ground but a mole popped his head out and screamed, "This is my hole so go away."

After a while, the mole decided to go for a nice stroll and left his hole. The giraffe could still smell the delicious treat in the hole and she couldn't resist anymore. She pushed her small head into the hole and looked around for the treat. But sadly, it was nowhere to be found. "Oh well!" sighed the giraffe.

Just then, she tried to stand up but her head was stuck! "HELP!" she cried "PLEASE HELP!" She jumped around in fear, desperately pulling her head but it was no use. Giraffe was stuck! The mole reappeared from his stroll and noticed the giraffe in an unusual situation. He grabbed her tail and pulled hard, attempting to free her head. No use! He pulled even harder this time. Suddenly, there was a strange CREAK and the giraffe's neck stretched ten times longer than before!

"My neck!" said the giraffe looking scared and confused at what had just happened. The mole stared up in horror at the humongous animal standing before him and accidentally looked at the sun.

"My eyes, it's too bright!" shouted the mole as he ran back into his hole. Days passed and the mole did not leave his hole. Giraffe called him but it was no use, he would never come out in the sunlight again as his eyes couldn't stand the bright glare of the sun.
