Historical Recount

WALT: edit and improve our writing.

In today's lesson, you are going to be editing and improving your historical recount that you wrote yesterday. To do this you need to start by checking that you have used the correct punctuation and spellings throughout your writing. You then need to see if you can improve or up-level any sentences in your work. Here are some examples of how I have edited and improved my historical recount:

Original:

It is sweltering hot in here I am hiding underneath my ragged blanket, on my rock-hard bed I can see the page clearly as the summer sun is shining through the holes in my blanket.

Edited:

It is sweltering hot in here, I am hiding underneath my ragged blanket, on my rock-hard bed, I can see the page clearly as the summer sun is shining through the holes in my blanket.

Original:

I closed my eyes and a tear rolled down my cheek as I tried to remember the last time I saw my family.

Improved:

I let my eyes close and a silent tear rolled down my cheek as I tried to summon up memories of the last time I saw my family.

Your Task:

It is over to you to edit and improve your work. You should start by checking your spellings and punctuation. Then, you should see if you can improve and up-level any sentences or sections in your writing.
